Technical Specifications of Process rule integrated Diagnostic Engine (PriDE)

Preamble :

1. PriDE is a tool to facilitate process experts build domain specific rule based diagnostic expert system applications.
2. PriDE has two components; a core engine and a Developer Studio; both run independently and both shall have feature rich GUIs.
3. Core engine runs expert system applications packaged in the form of Rule Books and shall have interfaces to Data stores which contain real world process data.
4. Developer Studio of PriDE facilitates domain experts create Rule Books and test them with simulated data, debug Rule books, facilitate building graphical display screens for showing the results of execution of Rule books and pack the Rule Books along with corresponding display screens as deployable applications to be executed in Core Engine.
5. A Rule Book consists of one or more Rules.
6. A Rule is defined to have a set of conditions and actions.
7. Conditions and actions of a Rule are associated with temporal inputs available in a Rule data store.
8. Conditions and actions of Rules are defined in terms of computing elements.
9. Rules can be chained i.e. one Rule may be connected to another Rule at either input or output stages, to form complex Rules.

Scope of Development :

Development includes architecture, design and implementation, testing, deploying and training at clients place. The following clauses apply to development.

Part I : Core Engine :

1. The Core engine shall have multi threaded execution context in which multiple Rule Books can run concurrently. Exact algorithm for developing Core engine shall be worked out during detail design phase. Suitability and requirement of both forward and back chaining shall be studied before finalizing the design and if required both shall be incorporated.
2. Core engine shall have a GUI which displays the results of Rule books executing in its context. The display formats shall show Status levels i.e. Alarm/trip, process parameter levels, Rule output status and associated diagnostic trees and diagnostic messages.
3. Core shall also generate statistics on the functioning of Rules and display these statistics in GUI.
4. Should display which version of Rule/rule Book is executing.
5. Core engine shall facilitate addition of user define messages to be displayed/sent as e-mails.
6. Core Engine shall be launched as a Service.

7. Core Engine shall log error/exception reports to a predefined log files.
8. Once launched core engine can not be stopped except by an authorized user.
9. Core engine shall have interfaces to process/application data stores for getting on-line data.
10. Core engine shall also have interfaces to raw digital data from sensor systems.
11. Possibility of interfacing Core engine with down stream systems using OPC shall also be explored.
12. Core Engine can be taken off-line in which case data shall be from a file interface.
13. Core engine facilitates a user to add new rules, but can not modify any existing Rules/Rule Books.
14. Any mutually agreed design alterations shall be incorporated during the development phase.
15. Retrieval and display of Reports in the form of PDF/MS Word documents from Data Store based on user authentication.

Part II : Developer Studio

1. The Studio facilitates domain experts build Rule Books, by using drag and drop of computing blocks available through a Toolbox. Tool box is populated using predefined computing blocks. However users can also add custom computing blocks to tool box.
2. The Studio facilitates creating, editing, compiling, running and debugging the Rule Books during development phase.
3. Studio should facilitate creation of different Rule Books in project workspace.
4. Studio shall have the facility of editing controls like undo, copy, paste, find, select etc.
5. Studio shall show multiple Rule Books in different windows simultaneously and these windows can be either tiled or cascaded.
6. Rules may be dragged and dropped from one Rule Book to another Rule Book in different window.
7. Studio facilitates printing of Rules in Graphical format as visible in project Workspace.
8. The computing blocks in Tool Box consist of conditional, trigonometric, hyperbolic, logical, Boolean, algebraic, process specific and user definable functions. Exact list of these computing blocks shall be finalized during detail design. Each predefined block will have predefined set of inputs and outputs. A Rule is formed by interconnecting the computing blocks using connection wires. Compatibility of interconnection of blocks in any rule must be automatically checked and any incompatible set of interconnections should be reported.
9. User can simulate inputs for a single computing block and test the output in the project workspace.
10. Rules may also be defined using Textual input for which a text editor should be provided within the Studio, the rule text editor should facilitate create, edit, modify rules. Exact Rule syntax when entered in textual format shall be finalized during detail design. However when rules are created using text editor, checking should be provided as per predefined syntax of rule grammar.

11. Rules shall be persisted in a rule data base and individual rules can be retrieved from the rule base for editing / modifications. Any rule may be deleted from rule base and new rule can be added to particular a rule base.
12. Every Rule is identified by user defined unique name.
13. Rule Books form a deployable set of rules packed as an application.
14. During development phase Rule books can be tested by running them in the core engine, from within the Studio.
15. Data Interfaces suitable to existing proprietary H/W platforms for acquiring data from real time processes shall be developed to test Rule Books. On-site support for developing interfaces to existing real time data acquisition H/W has to be provided. Interfaces to existing H/W platform should be carried out on “as is where is” condition. Time period for this shall be the project development time.
16. Interfaces to external data files and applications providing data shall also be developed. Data from external sources can be in the form of either a CSV file or MS Excel Spread sheet.
17. Debugging the rule while in execution to be provided. Debugging should incorporate break points at user selected locations in a Rule / Rule Book. Watch window should show the state of input / output variables / memory variables of any rule / rule book, during debugging.
18. the Studio should facilitate designing of output graphic screens of Applications which run in Core engine; these screens show the out put of executing Rule Book, the output screens may consist of graphical display of Alarm/Trip Levels, process parameter levels / Rule out put status and associated diagnostic trees, messages, event lists etc.
19. When complex rules are defined rule loop deadlock prevention should be checked and reported.
20. Version control mechanism for Rule Books.
21. Any mutually agreed design alterations shall be incorporated during the development phase.

Common to Part I and Part II:

1. Language of implementation shall be C++ / C# / Java; shall be decided during detail design.
2. OS is MS Windows XP, Prof. / Vista.
3. Data store can be MS Access/Oracle/MS SQL.
4. Security in terms of authorization to edit / modify / delete a rule within a rule book; to add new rule to existing rule book; should be provided. Full logic of any Rule book can only be seen when full authorization rights granted. Authorization can be organized into different levels to provide different functionality. Security/authorization details shall be worked out during detail design.
5. Total time of development for Part I and Part II shall not be more than eight months.
