J. INCENTIVE / PENALTY AGAINST SCRAP GENERATION

During execution of contract, the contractor has to restrict scrap generation (including burning allowance) as per scrap norms mentioned in the tender.

- (a) In case the scrap generation is less than the allowable norms, the contractor shall be eligible for incentive and same will be awarded with mutual consent. The incentive will be given to the contractor in the form of increase in quantity in the same work order or subsequent work order of the Framework Agreement or Contract.

Saving in scrap generation w.r.t. scrap norms	Increase of quantum in next Work Order
More than 10%	10% of Work Order Qty. for which contractor is eligible for incentive

Example:-

WO Qty: 100 MT

Allowable scrap norms (a): 4% (say)

Allowable scrap weight (b): 4.0 MT

Scrap generated in WO execution (c): 3.5 MT

Saving w.r.t. scrap norms (d) = $[(b)-(c)] / (b) \times 100 = 12.5\%$

Hence, as scrap saving is more than 10%, contractor is eligible for Incentive.

- (b) In case the scrap generation by contractor exceeds the allowed norms as mentioned in the contract, the contractor shall be penalised and a penalty of amount equivalent to material cost against excess scrap generation (i.e., over allowed norms) shall be recovered from running bills of the contractor. The cost of the material shall be calculated at last purchase price by BHEL. However, in special cases where scrap percentage is higher than allowed norms (due to job profile, available material size, drawing revision etc.) and prior approval of cutting plan has been taken by contractor, penalty will not be applicable for such cases.
- (c) Work order wise analysis will be done for scrap generation and accordingly incentive will be decided.”
